A Very Sad Case.

There were in the police court yester-day five cases, including that of Annie Porter, a young girl arrested by Officer Donley on the South Side early yester-day morning for drunkenness. She felt her position keenly, and said she was an orphan, and had been living at a South Side boarding house as a domestic. Several of the boarders got her and other girls intoxicated. Ohiel Delbrugge interested himself in the girl's case, and secured her a place in the West Virginia Home for Friendless Women.

From this on, he described his movements until after his arrest, saying he did not know his wife was shot. The revolver was shown him, and he identified it. The cross examination did not throw much light on the case. He said, however, that while struggling with his wife they were all the time within two feet of each other, and did not change their positions.

Henry Schwariz, assloon keeper, and Events Which Led Up to It-Testimony as to His Good Character-The Wife's Story.

The prosecution rested its case in the trial of the State against Louis Hildebraud, Indicted for the murder of his their positions. Henry Schwarts, a saloon keeper, and Byron Bolts both testified that they knew Hildebrand, and that he was a brand after she was shot, and not long before she died.

The defense then began taking testimony, the main portion of it being as to Hildebrand's peaceable character and disposition. The feature of the day. wife, about half past eleven o'clock yes-terday forenoon, having got to the jury however, was the examination of the prisoner/Louis Hildebrand. He was on the stand an hour, and told a reasonably straight story, without hesitation or confusion. His explanation of the shooting was plausible, but for the fact that his wife's fatal wound was in the back. Those who had known Hildebrand a long time gave him a reasonably good character, while his wife was spoken of as a woman of quarrelsome disposition.

When the court adjourned on Monday evening, Patrick Weir was on the stand. He was recalled when court opened yesterday, and his examination resumed. He was one of the first persons who reached Mrs. Hildebrand on the Saturday night of the shooting, September 29 last, after the fatal shot had been fired. He finished his testimony as to the position in which he found the woman and what was done with her, and also told of statements she made concerning the shooting, these statements being admitted as evidence. Officers Carney and Shorts, of the city police force, were examined, but their testimony was not important. The evidence of William Foreman, who was on the stand the previous day, but was excused pending a decision by the court on the question of admissibility, was also unimportant, the statements make to him by Mrs. Hildebrand not coming within the legal definition of an ante morters statement.

Mrs. Holmes, a neighbor of the Hildebrands at the time of the shooting, was sworn. She said she had gone into the house almost immediately after the shooting, and had remained up until within thirty minutes of the time Mrs. Hildebrand died. In that time she heard the wounded woman repeas at least half a dozen different times the statement:

"I am going to die. I won't be alive in the morning. W husband. Lou statement:

"I am going to die. I won't be alive in the morning. My husband, Lou Hildebrand, killed me."

Mildebrand, killed me."

Mrs. Holmes' testimony closed the case for the prosecution. The defendant's lawyers then severally called Mrs. Gilmartin, Mrs. Haslett, Lawrence Clark and Mrs. Lewrence Clark, all of whom testified that they had always considered Hildebrand a peaceable man of good disposition.

Mrs. Haslett also said that she had heard Mrs. Hildebrand and astreet fruit vender, on the Thursday before the shooting, engaged in a sort of a row, and that she had heard Mrs. Hildebrand say there would "be a Dutch or an Irish funeral in the house before Sunday."

It is keenly felt by each and every member and we all, Individually and collectively, have indeed sustained a great leas in being deprived of a true and faithful companion and friend, both in joy and sorrow.

Mrs. Rosenburg was a true and devoted wife; she was as kind and tender a mother as ever lived; a noble and self-denying sister and a righteous woman in Israel. Mrs. Duncan, a woman whose premises abutted in the rear on the rear of the premises on which is located the house in which the shooting occurred, testified that she was at her home on the night of Saturday, September 29, and heard the shots lired. Just after she saw two men walk rapidly down the alley from the direction of the Hildebrand house, and heard one of them say:

"Don't you tell on me!" or words to that effect.

The prisoner, Louis Hildebrand, was

"Non't you tell on me!" or words to that effect.

The prisoner, Louis Hildebrand, was then called to the stand, and the audience became as still as the grave. Col. Arnett conducted his examination in chief, and Mr. Sommerville his cross-examination. The prisoner was apparently free from agitation or confusion, and told his story without hesitancy. He said he was not working on the $2th of last September, but went to the mill where he was employed about 11 o'clock in the forenoon to get his money. He got $10 and some cents, this paying for elever days' work. He went to several stores, buying different articles at each, one of these articles being whisky. On his cross-examination he said he kept whisky at home, and he sand his wife both drank it there. He went home that afternoon and evening three times. He met his wife on the street and gave her some money—$5 and some change; he did not remember the exact amount.

The third time he went home, his wife asked him for more money. This was about 0 o'clock. They had some words, and he left and went into Mrs. Cook's hitchen, in another part of the same house. He sat down there and began talking to his dog, which followed him in. He did not recollect just what he said to the dog. He often went into Mrs. Cook's and sat down to chat, both when he had been drinking and when he was sober.

he had been drinking and when he was sober.

This time he had been there but a short time when his wife came in and caught hold of his ear, telling him to come in his own house, and asking if Mr. Cook came into their kitchen when he (Hildebrand) was out. She pulled right hard. At first he resisted a little, but not desiring to have a fight there, finally went with her.

The evidence for the plaintiff in the case of Dr. J. H. Pipes vs. Dr. J. W. Mc-Coy, to recover $5,000 damages alleged to have been sustained on account of slanderous utterances, was closed last evening shortly after 5 o'clock. Yester day Louis Custer, J. A. Arkle, Hermann Bents, Louisa Haberfield, John Wolford, D. W. Keller, Mrs. Emma Strotman, John Devine, Louisa Guster and Miss Bickerton testified as to the statements made to them or in their hearing by Dr. J. W. McCoy, to the effect that Dr. Pipes had been guilty of improper relations with Miss Greenlee, a teacher, and that had gone to a house of assignation with a neat little woman, closely veiled, supposed to be Miss Stevens, another teacher. Nearly all of these statements were made when Dr. McCoy was circulating a remostrance agrinst the reappointment of these teachers.

Dr. Pipes himself was the last witness on his own behalf. His testimony was mainly directed to showing that he had lost patrons, but admitted that he had lost patrons, but admitted that he had got patrons, but admitted that he statements were made when Dr. McCoy do the patrons and that this was so every year of his practice. People had told him of others who would have employed him had it not been for these reports.

NATURAL GAS FINANCES.

The Contract System Declared Unfair-The Wheeling Company. At the annual meeting of the Wheel-ing Natural Gas Company on Monday, a number of interesting reports were sub-mitted, which were crowded out yesterday. The financial statement shows the total assets to be $1,159,517 69, on which day. The financial statement shows the total assets to be $1,159,517 69, on which there exists an indebtedness of $30,404 00, the sum of $189,173 60 in excess of capital and debt having been paid out of carnings. The earnings for the year amounted to $185,689 93; the running expenses to $50,638 79, equal to $7.27 per cent of the earnings, showing an increase in earnings and decrease in expenses over that of the year ending March 31, 1888, of 4.31 per cent.

The board reports that the contract system has long been recognized as an unjust and unequal way of selling and consuming natural gas, and that the meter system will be substituted just as fast as possible without injustice to the consumer. The following leases are held by the company; Good, 5,984; undeveloped, 5,850; total, 11,834; annual rentals, $7,279. During the month of January the company came into possession of leases on about 5,400 acres of new territory in Washington county, adjoining the Taylorstown field. Of the 4,282 acres held in the Taylorstown field the company owns all the gas rights in 3,657 acres and all the oil rights on 1,372 acres.

The gross earnings of the company for the year was $185,689 98, making an average sale of $15,474 16. Of the disbursements, $50,638 79 is charged to the expense account, $10,822 15 to construction and $22,791 55 to wells and leases. The original rental of these was $17,600.

THE INTIMIDATION CASE. Special Deputy Marshal Gaus Arraigne The case of Policeman George Gaus, who last November acted as Deputy U. S. Marshal at the Second ward polls, and who was accused by J. D. Maxwell before United States Commissioner Forbes yesterday afternoon. The accused was represented by John O. Pendleton. Mr. Maxwell testified that on election day he was approaching the polls, and stopped for a moment, when Gaus laid his hand on his shoulder and told him he would have to get out. He left, but returned several times, seeing Gaus at the poils each time. Finally he voted in the afternoon. Gaus said he only wanted to clear the narrow approach to the polls. The Commissioner reserved his decision to look up the law as to the duties of the United States Marshals at voting places. before United States Commissioner
